is foll complement of artillary, the whole to form a force larger by nearly a third than has hitherto been contemplated for officanive purposes outside the United Kingdom.

Joff the disappearance of the term Army Corps we have no particular complaint to make: it is of Igrama origin; it never fitted in with our peak system, and was flang to the wiods in time of war, And if a reduction was to be made in the racks of the Regular Army, it was obvious that the infastry must be the sofferen: even so, we regret that Mr. Hidden did not see his way to relaist the land of the third than the sofferen: even so, we regret that Mr. Hidden did not see his way to relaist the name of the disappearing battalines rather than resort to the densite process of dishadment of the control of the disappearing battalines rather than resort to the densite process of dishadment of the control of the disappearing battalines which is against interference with the Artillery that we feel bound to utter the stongest protest of which the language is espekle. Mr. Hidson gave the film y pestent that made the present system only half the existing latteries could be mobilised for want of mea and of ammunition columns. As Mr. Bellow pointed out in an admirable piece of critical in a large proportion of these batteries are on tree versation, and time has not yet permitted of the growth of a sufficient Researce. But this is accumulating yearly year. and of assumultion columns As Mr. Belfort pointed out in an admirable piece of enticions, a large proportion of these batteries are on new creation, and time has not yet permitted of the growth of a sufficient Beserve. But this is economicating year by year, and white nearly 4,000 artillarymen are to be dismissed, Mr. Haldane alters the terms of service for new records, substituting six years with the colours and six with the Reserve for the present period of three and nine. The combination of those two changes mixe bring about a rapid and actionatic fall in the number of men annually joining the Beserve. The result is a large diminition in the amount of trained artillary experts available for service at home and shread, in mon, moreover, who can settler be improvised or replaced. The makeshift of petting in Milling, and Garrison Artillery to assist the field batteries is an expedient which we regard with the gravest surpicion. Any reference to modern campaigns will about that the ammunition columns require shift and experience corredy second of what is demanded in the hatteries its message and the mingling of men trained under differs: to conditions and with totally different experiences is bound to introduce a fatal confusion. Mr. Haldane has been guided apparently by the standard of scooses stationed in one of two picked. Militia, regiments. We are afraid he has been the victim of a generalization.

THE LATE COL. SPARKES.

The death of Colone W.S. Sparkes, O.M. G., retired list, Welch Engiment, at the early age of forty-four, is very sad, says the "Army and Navy Garstet." It was not so long age that every-doy was saying how locky he was ab get promotion so coarly. Yet his very good lock proved in the end to his disadvantage, for he became a colonel in the Army so early in lite that there was difficulty in providing for him. In the province of Bahte-flowal his measure will long be remembered in connection with the work for this readilities, of that In the province of Rehrel-Chasel she-name will long be seemanbeed; in sensention with the work for the real-sing of that region and pringing it back to rivilization. He displayed great powers of organization and similarisation, and richly assend the O.M.G. which was conferred upon him in schnowledgment of his services. When he came home and settled down after his retirement he seemed to be in colour health. The week before his death he was taken ill white playing pole. Nothing mach was always the playing pole. While of interest mainly to scholars, and more particularly, to students of archusley, the exhibition of Egyptian antiquities opened last week by Lord Darby in the appet transept of the Darby Museum, Liverpool,—may, the "Liverpool Poot" says, be recommended to the attention of the ordinary citizen as a neefal object-lesson in remote history, and as a means of giving a bestlyst timulus to the imagination. The collection oversite aristance to the seventh annual xero. timulus to the imagination. The collection rows its existence to the seventh annual expedition to the Nile Valley, under the asspices of the University Institute of Archanley, of Mr. John Garstang, reader in Egyptology at the Liverpool University, and Mr. B Hesold Jones, whose actistic talents have been outlet greatest value towards securing a worthy record of this and previous operations; and both the public spirited supporters of the Institutes and the explorers are entitled to hearty congratalations agen the high intripicio and historical value of the results of their latest enterprise. The exhibition, which remains open till the Selb insti, is a tooco a tribute to open till the 26th inst, is at once a tribute to the expert industry of a five months' expedi-tion and a striking evidence of the richness ce of the spoils of Egypt in these modern days.

The chief historical interest centres in the discoveries made in a hitherto undisturbed necropolis near the ancient fortress of Kostamneh, in the heart of Nahis. Here, about 200 graves were excavated and searched, and the objects found are believed to give a clue to the graves were excovated and—settphed, and the objects found are believed to give a clue to the people that formed the earliest-population of Egypt, who, many thousands of years B.C. tapparently trakked across the desert from Somalisand to Nubia, where they obviously settled for a long time. As far as can be judged, these people retained their primitive civiliation in Nubia long after the rest of Egypt had greatly advanced in development—possibly down to the Twelth Dynasty (B.C. 2000). It is interesting to note in this connection that a comparison of the results of the researched of Dr. Forbse (Director of the Liverpool Museum) in Somalisand and those of the expedition under notice strikingly confirm the theory of the de-cent of these people form Somalisand, and of the old tradition of the Egyptians themsleves that they were related to the people of that country, with whom they were rever at war, but always meintaised a firm friendship and an an edwardage of products.

that country, with whom they were never at war, but always maintained a firm friendship and an advantageous exchange of products. The exhibits are, for the most part, arranged chronologically, and the first objects to claim of the same of the sam

The head and hody are now shown together, and are suggestive of quite all little romano in archivological reasarch.

The exhibition is extraordizarily rich in pottery—pottery of all abspace and cisse and of many colours. To the same period belong several handrade of soarab seals, the uses of which among the ancients were very extractive, with whose, for instance, they answered the same purposes act he looks and keys of to day. The rich yield at Esna and Abydos also comprises a series of pottary, some-inscribed tembetomes, a carved ivery wand, possibly a horsecope, a plaied log for false haft, some ivery hattpites, and a valuable historical insortpiton embeddied in the tombatone of a gentleman who lived in troubloss Hykeos times—Knossa, "the Ohan-cellor's son," in whose spitable, it was notified, the Mastele of Knowsley showed a paternal concern.

Many of these specimens of advanced at a ran supposed to belong to the same puriods as the orader workmankip of the Nobian tombs; so that an instructive feature of the archibition as a whole is the vidence it gives of the contemporateous existence in the Nils Valley, of two civilications of widely differing stages of development.

A CLAY-MOISTENER.

To many people the best thing about summer is that, like oricket, it provides an accollent scause for a long drink. Their satisfaction is probably mitigated to a certain extent by the fact that hot weather does not go well with the consumption of alcohol; but nowadays there are a great many temperance drinks which may be appreached with good results. A contemporary speaks with good results. A contemporary speaks with genuine feeling of a certain non-alcoholic lagar. Cost magnifique, as the French General said of/the charge at Balaclava, mais on set passages. So well in it selling that 14d. a bottle is all that the benevolent vendor demands for two demands of the south of which we have been successful to the selling that the selling that the benevolent vendor demands or it we have good some some and pleasantones. Brett now, bowever, we doubt whether the really perfact summer of rision, we get a dimidea of the sort of drink to which weigers, but we have nowe across it in real life. It is imapensive. That is one of its great charms. It has comathing of the delicate fit your of barley-water, combined with the robeatness of shandygaff. There is a suggestion of champage, a supploint of, claref, a soupcon of ordens de menthe, and perhaps a mere shadow of lime jious. It is good for ona. Indeed, carrionally ancogh, the more one take, the better one feels. Some day we hope to meet this beverage. At present it is merely, as we say, a vision. ("Globe.")

AMERICAN COTTON PROSPECTS.

The view is gaining ground that in the new eason this sommer the American cotton crop will be considerably larger than that of last year. The weather has been very favorable, and the area under outlivation is desidedly larger as compared with recent years. It is too econe for an estimate of growth to be isseed, but leading transvorthy authorities consider that the outlook at the mosent warrants a yield of felly one million bales more than in the outton year ending Angust next. Be this as it may, the consception throughout the vorbit is at full stretch, and new pinning mills are springing on Din all directions, notably in Laposahirs and the Southern States of America.
